Repudiation-What Is It? Editors Appeal.—Since the days of "re-construction" the southern States have been laboring under carpetbag governments and the gigantic political, financial and social evils necessarily incident to such apologies for honest rule. Their first struggle was to get rid of the governments themselves, as they were the foul nests which hatched out all the oul corruption and vice that have cursed the south since the war. Beginning with Virginia and Georgia, the struggle has now ended in freeing all of them from the grasp most delicious, pure and digestible bread, bister plunder her people. Having obtained control of their own State governments, their next effort was, and will be, to rid themselves the evils naturally flowing from the corrupt governments which have been displaced. The south has been like a man afflicted with the small-pox. The doctor first gets rid of the disease, and the next thing is to destroy and disinfect the poison lurking in his patient's clothing, etc. Among the curses left us by the curpetbag rascals, whose day has just ended, is an enormous debt in every southern State on which they laid their hands, save Mississippi, which, most fortunat ly for her citizens, had no credit. In the brief period of three years from the day they controlled the negro vote, these vultures loaded every State with a debt, under which they are still staggering; a debt measured only by millions; a debt created without equivalent consideration, immediate or prospective, save as it filled the purses of the rogues creating it; a debt which has no benefit, digovernment is only paying for work at the rate of fifteen cents per hour, but refuses to pay for gas. If some company had progressed with spirit, and State bonds were needed, the law provided that the road should be inspected by commissioners, and if they reported lavorably, the governor was authorized to issue State bonds ten thousand and sometimes fifteen thousand dollars per mile, for buying iron and equipment. It is easy to believe that who all were swindlers, there was no trouble is getting the necessary certificates or the bonds and thus the railroad companies of that State obtained millions of State bonds upon the most open and brazen frauds. Of course the onds thus fraudulently obtained, were as fraudulently used, and they were often sole to bond speculators for a mere song, and the money quietly put into the pockets of the rogues controlling the roads; the State officials often receiving their share of the spoils as the price of their consent to wink at this rascality. This brief history of the Arkansas bond programme will serve to show how "sacred" is much of her debt. To refuse to pay these "sacred" bonds is called "repudiation." Would it be a stain upon "the honor" of the people of that State to re pudiate such debts? Would not an individ nal do it? Is a State anything but a society of individuals? Congress has passed a law by which Mr. Brown can free himself from any debt he owes Mr. Jones. He may hav bought from Jones food and clothing for wif-and children. But with one stroke of hi pen and an oath, he can say to Mr. Jones, thus discharge this debt." This is regard as legal, if not honest, even though the debt be the most sacred a man can contract. About this procedure no cry of "repudia-tion" is raised. But if a parcel of knaves first deprive thousands of the tax-payers of a State of the right to vote, and then secure a corrupt legislature for the purpose of passing corrupt laws to secure fraudulent objects, and start bogus railroads and get Stat bonds for them through swindles patent to everybody, as well bond-buyer as bond-seller —I say when all this is done, it is criminal for the people to say they will not pay such bonds! The State, or the people, cannot go into a court of bankruptcy and wipe out thes fraudulent debts as an individual can. It all right for an individual to repudiat a debt for food and clothing, the most sacred of all obligations; but it is "horrible, "criminal," for a State to refuse to pay debt that have not the first element of honor, ho esty or equity about them! 'Tis said the bonds have passed into the hands of "inn cent" parties. "Innocent" of what? O "notice?" Surely not. If a notorious scamp paper, would not the fact of its being found in such hands be constructive notice to be ware of trading for it? Did not these bond holders know of the fraudulent legislatur and its fraudulent acts? Did they not kno of the corrupt conduct of the State officials Did they not know that the people had no been heard in the fraudulent legislation by which these bonds were issued? And, t make the matter worse, it is quite probable that some of these bondholders who are now horrified at the idea of "repudiation" are themselves "repudiators," through the bank-rupt law, of debts infinitely more sacred than many of these southern State debts.
